

Course Overview

Have you experienced the death of another person? If you haven't, you will. We will all die one day and we will all experience the death of another person at some point in our lives. In social care, we often work with people with medical conditions and ill-health. People are not generally comfortable talking about death but it is something that you need to prepare for in your work. Much of what we will cover in this course will also be relevant to you personally.

The key objective for people working in health and social care is to support people to have a good death experience. This course will enable you to better manage working with people who need end of life care. If you are currently experiencing grief or someone close to you is terminally ill, you may need to seek support as you work your way through this course.

Course Content

1. What is end of life care?
2. Legislation relating to end of life care
3. Common Core Principles
4. 7 Stages of grief in terminal illness
5. Supporting people with their thoughts and feelings
6. The importance of beliefs, religion and culture
7. Promoting choice and control
8. Roles of key people
9. Advanced Care Planning and Advance Decisions
10. Communication
11. Conflict
12. Maintaining comfort and wellbeing
13. Signs of death
14. What happens after a person dies
15. Managing your own feelings and getting help

Course Duration

 1 hour

Developed in partnership with end of life care specialists.

Accessibility

To change your accessibility settings or translate the course into another language, sign into your Click account before taking this course.

Assessment and Certification

Sign in to your Click account before you take this course to take the assessment and immediately access/download your certificate upon successful completion.

Quality Marks